Q: (IOS) How to show different fragment according to the ViewController on Swift Currently i am using a NavController to create a left-right navigation between ViewControllers. I was looking for a different navigation approach. First idea I have been working on is to implement a TabController. My question is how to link the ViewControllers on the TabPages. Below is my expected output for the scenario. For ViewController 1, this is how I have set up for the left-right nav:

ViewController2 and ViewController3 are the two activities for this ViewController For ViewController 2, this is how it looks like on the left: As you can see, I want to have a different layout for both the ViewControllers. I was wondering if there is an easier way of doing this. Any help will be appreciated. Thanks A: I have no experience with the use of TabController in IOS. If you want to know what is better between TabController and Navigation controller, check this

What's New in the Adobe Photoshop 2022 (Version 23.1)?

A longtime goal of epic games is to get players to kill each other, and if you ask Twitter's Vlambeer, that's exactly what they're setting out to do with a new game called Death by Video Game, as The Guardian reports. The game is still in early stages, but its developer, Nels Anderson, says it's basically a Call of Duty-style shooter that will encourage players to "cause as much chaos, death, and destruction as possible" and allow them to "quite literally [kill] each other." "You're physically playing a video game in a violent way." "You're physically playing a video game in a violent way. I just realized that," Anderson told The Guardian. "Maybe we need more games like that." In a way, Death by Video Game is the antithesis of Game Dev Story, an indie hit that pits you and other players against each other in a game where all the enemies are rabidly trying to murder you, and where every single one of your decisions is made in a quest to maximize its overall win. Game Dev Story isn't a shoot-'em-up, but the concept of wanting to play a game like Call of Duty isn't a new one. In 2016, Fortnite caught the nation's attention by allowing players to kill each other in a game of "Capture the Flag." But Death by Video Game is the first time Vlambeer — a studio that was responsible for the 2003 hit games Ridiculous Fishing and Episodic — is attempting to make a game where physical violence becomes a goal. "It's impossible to see that as a negative — it's an incredible value," Vlambeer told The Guardian. "Maybe there's room for that kind of work in video games. What if you could play more interesting games?" Asian production largely under threat 8/1/2012 On the back of their strong growth over the last several years, one of the best performing markets in the world in recent years will be in danger of coming to a halt over the next few years. Under the guise of a broadening economic recovery, global manufacturing seems to be under threat from the eurozone, America and Japan, the weakest link in the region
