Notes on the process: We’ve discovered a unique approach to porting our game to the ARPG platform, which allows us to continue to polish Monado eventually for Windows and Android and serve as a showcase for mods and support for the ARPG platform. Before that can happen we’re going to address a few issues:

Animations: We've added multiple layers of sand to move more smoothly, and eliminate jumping volumes. Additionally, we've added a rear take-off to the character, both on the ground and into the air.

Class Abilities: We're continuing to polish the system of class attributes and defining a powerful endpoint, while keeping an eye on the base class concept of abilities. Ultimately we're going to reintroduce the Mentor class with a level that limits class abilities but raises character power.

DoneCasady To Run for Cook County Board President Brian Casady, the state representative representing parts of the South and West sides, says he will challenge an incumbent in the Cook County Board’s top position. Casady, whose district is the south side, will face off against incumbent Anne Kouri in the November 2014 election. “I am running for Cook County Board president to represent the urban Southwest side,” Casady said. “My campaign will be based on community building and a focus on the empowerment of the communities in my district.” Casady is also running for treasurer, but if elected he would be the top vote getter in his race. Under Illinois’ highly drawn-out election system, he would automatically serve on the board after the November 2014 elections. Kouri, a lawyer, made a bid for the county board presidency last year but dropped out before the primary. The Cook County Board seats are divided among 32 members, and each district gets one. Kouri’s campaign had not responded to requests for comment as of Wednesday night. A Facebook campaign to support Kouri and the anti-Casady effort, was launched Thursday. It lists two options to vote for Kouri: Pro-Kouri or No Thanks. Casady plans to stay in the House until the November 2014 elections.
