Evocative music, rich atmospheres and a strong emotional impact in the heart of the game were the base for the musical direction of Beyond the Sky. Of course there is no lack of high scores for the music, and the theme is quite memorable. I would especially recommend the main theme, which is hauntingly gorgeous in the true form of the atmosphere of Beyond the Sky. There are some very nice echoes of the past, as well as some new and fresh experiences with a chorus of sorts for each of the levels. The unique and very distinct main theme fits perfectly and matches the environment of the story. The music is very well compiled, and the atmosphere is rich and deep, each track standing out in its own fashion, but yet allows each track to merge and flow into the whole. I can even tell without a doubt that there is a musical undertone of complex imagination, and this takes place right through the composition. The music is simply beautiful, deep, and warm. As a listener I am completely overwhelmed, and as a composer I could not have wished for anything better. These two pieces are accompanied by the melodic counterpart and sometimes give a 'European' touch to the whole piece. These are very reminiscent of the Electra by Karplus & Brendel, but with a touch of the Escher. However, the dynamic atmosphere is not only the result of these pieces, but also of new ones and tracks in the level. You will feel a large musical scale in combination with the ambiance, a small musical scale in combination with a calm atmosphere and a large scale when you are transported to an unusual and scary world. The composer's decisions were all well chosen and well made, and I highly recommend this soundtrack as

The word list is:Q: VMWare ESXi 4 Guest Networking Issues with Cisco 2960G and 2850G We have a pair of Cisco 2960G switches connected to a pair of 2850G switches that are all connected to an ESXi 4.0 host using a VMWare VMXNET2 virtual nic. The host is a 64 bit centos 6.2. We are seeing extremely poor performance on the virtual interface and, with the login prompt on the host, it takes over a minute to ssh in (the vmware agent takes much longer to complete, meaning we can not use the login prompt). The connection to the vmxnet2 nic is all static, so any suggestions as to what I can change to stop this? I have set the MTU to 1500 and managed to get it to nearly half this. It is still around 15 seconds to 10 mins. I have tried disabling the igmp macvlan and macvlan interfaces, but no change in performance. I have had no problems doing this on a host with a different cisco 29xx switch and I was able to simply disable the cisco interface on the host. What can I do to get this issue to behave itself? A: Thanks for your input, but I think I finally found a solution. I was really hoping that we could just disable the cisco interface on the vmxnet2 virtual interface, but VMware put it back in the vmxnet2 adapter configuration, so the VNIC got assigned a different mac address for some strange reason. I finally discovered that with ESXi 4 and the cisco2850g you can assign a static
