Working with Configurations The term _configuration_ describes how objects behave in a drawing. By default, objects have a default behavior, but objects can have their default behavior altered by the user. In the second example from the previous subsection, I did not specify that the default behavior be dynamic. The dynamic option in the Object Properties dialog box was not set, so the rectangle was not constrained to follow the cursor or other object. The following example shows the default behavior in a simple box shape. The default behavior is to always move along the axis, unlike the rectangle example. * * * af5dca3d97

A pilot study of speech discrimination in people with unilateral hearing loss. To compare the efficacy of forward and reverse speech perception tests in normal hearing and hearing-impaired people and to explore the reliability of the FAS and the RAS tests. Reverse and forward versions of a phoneme discrimination test were administered to 10 normal-hearing and 10 unilateral hearing-impaired adults. Analyses revealed that the number of correct responses for each test was significantly higher for the normal-hearing group than the group with unilateral hearing loss. Speech perception scores for the FAS test were more reliable than the RAS test. The forward version of the speech discrimination test showed a greater inter-test reliability than the reverse version. Normal-hearing and hearing-impaired groups had similar speech perception ability, but the number of correct responses was higher in the normal-hearing group. The results indicate that the forward version of the speech discrimination test is more reliable than the reverse test. the "Insurance Regulation" article) because it did not reach the merits. The panel opinion did not reach the merits either. The court of appeals reasoned that it lacked subject matter jurisdiction because of two exceptions to the general prohibition against district court review of administrative decisions in INS cases. The court held that jurisdiction was proper in district court pursuant to 8 U.S.C. § 1329 (1988) (authorizing district courts to review final orders of deportation) and 8 U.S.C. § 1105a (1988) (the provision governing judicial review of deportation orders).
